Detour Destinations

In 2025, travelers are not only taking the road well-traveled, they're also taking detours to experience new places. Detour Destinations are less well-known and less crowded than tourist hotspots, but these rising stars are well worth putting on an itinerary, either as an add-on or the main destination.

Expedia's list of Detour Destinations all experienced an increase in searches over the past year, and 63% of consumers say they are likely to visit a detour destination on their next trip*.

Goods Getaways

It's time to leave the keychains and fridge magnets at the gift shop. Travelers are going the distance in search of treasures they can't get at home and can't go home without. On TikTok, everything from a chocolate bar from Dubai, skincare products from Korea, candy from Japan, and butter from France have gone viral. Gen Z can't wait to get their hands on these specialty goods.

In addition to sightseeing and visiting tourist attractions, travelers are also frequenting local supermarkets and grocery stores to find local delicacies. Global survey data show that 39% of travelers usually visit a grocery store and 44% shop to buy local goods they can't get at home*.

Coffee tours in Costa Rica, tea tastings in China, and matcha experiences in Japan are some of the most popular goods getaway experiences on Expedia. Travelers are clearly entering a new souven-era**.

One-Click Trips

It's no secret that travelers turn to travel influencers they trust and admire for ideas and inspiration. And half of all consumers make daily, weekly or monthly purchases because of influencer posts.** Social shopping has become the new normal with TikTok and Instagram, but this growing e-commerce trend has just scratched the surface with bigger-ticket categories like travel. Half of consumers say they have wanted to book a trip they saw on their social feeds, but cited time and complexity as the leading reasons that have prevented them from doing so*.
